The Arborist

Modern, tactile, and imperfect leaves take center stage, moving away from traditional decorative florals. Designers lean into the organic quality of plants, spotlighting dimensional leaf motifs and naturalistic representations. Forest and tree scenes, often revealed in deep, moody colors, capture the essence of nature's complexity. The designs showcase careful botanical detailing, with surfaces broken by bouclé textures, metallic accents, and intricate leaf veining that celebrates the wild and unpredictable nature of botanical forms.
